

Reflection of the First Four Assignments

Before I started this class, I had no idea what a primary article or a review article was. Not only did I learn what the difference between the two articles was, but I also learned how to effectively search for them using our school's library. I also did not know how to properly cite a paper on my own until writing assignment three. With this new information, I am confident that I can write better research papers and that this will prove to be extremely useful in my upcoming science classes.
