

In the following attachments, here are examples of some fake websites. In the first picture is an attempt to notify me on my expiring Sams Club membership. Some of the fake signs are “from” line, the misspellings in the e-mail, the odd spacing between words, bad grammar, and the urgency to make a “payment”. In the “UPS” e-mail, it is mostly the same thing as the last e-mail. The fake UPS logo, the fake tracking number, the urgency to fix the “issue”. Lastly, in the Facebook e-mail, the “from” has a fake Facebook trademark, the grammatical error of the options of “report the user” and “yes, me”. The difference between these “fake” websites and the real ones are as follows. Real websites will send an e-mail from a “support/no reply e-mail”. They will contain your actual
