

I believe that the media often oversimplifies many cyber-related concepts and exaggerates the capabilities of vulnerabilities. One example of a vulnerability being abused in the video was an issue with the infotainment system in a vehicle that allowed hackers to take over a vehicle. Keren Elazari stated that it was highly unlikely that a hacker was able to simultaneously gain complete control over multiple different vehicles of different models. Additionally, the media tends to oversimplify and not show the full context of cybersecurity issues. The damages of an attack may be the main focus, while the underlying cause, which may be a simple error, remains an uncommon topic.

https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_ojA5OqOKYo&t=1s